Share of votes in Husqvarna exceeds 30 percent as a result of other owners converting class A-shares to class B-shares

Earlier today, Husqvarna announced that certain owners have requested a conversion of class A-shares into B-shares, thereby reducing the total number of votes in the company. As a direct consequence, Investor's share of the votes in Husqvarna has increased to 30.78 percent (from 29.51 percent). The share of capital owned by Investor remains unchanged at 15.73 percent.

As Investor's increased share of the votes is not the result of any active adjustment to its holding, exceeding 30 percent of the votes does not trigger a mandatory bid for the remaining shares in the company.
